

Manage your account and users

This page and its subpages explain how to manage your company account and the users within your company account.

There are two different types of accounts:

- The company account represents your company or organization. All users need to belong to one company account.
- The user account represents a single user (i.e. person) of your company or organization. As obvious, there can be several user accounts in one company account.

By default, users login with email and password. You can also switch to Active Directory authentication if required. See page Configure Active Directory Authentication for more.

Read on about Administer Your Company Account